

Bird's-Eye View

The San Francisco Decorator Showcase is a yearly event that brings 28 designers under one roof, each creating a unique room all their own. "This wasn't the first time I visited this home, as it was the SF Showcase house in 1989 and I came with my mom and her designer," says interior designer Kendra Nash. "But when revisiting this year, the space was filled with gorgeous natural light. I was hit with sunlight in my face, and then a large flock of birds rushed by the window. I immediately thought about enveloping a space around this full-circle moment."

The bathroom is filled with whimsical nods to birds, including wallpapers and light fixtures that feel like camouflaged circular eyes. There's also a cheeky Ashley Longshore vase called 'The Bird,' and plenty of vintage accessories. "Mixing modern elements with organic natural details in a playful way is true to my personal style of design," Kendra says. "I envisioned this bathroom as a space that balances both masculine and feminine details so everyone would want to use it."
